SUMMARY

I have always had a passion for learning new things. Going into the field of Computer Science, I knew that I would be able to continue to have that passion due to technology constantly changing. I like to tackle new challenges headstrong, and I pursue said challenges until throughout their duration. I have a calm and caring type of personality which allows me to work well with people very easily. I'm looking forward to developing software, and expanding my knowledge of the technological field.

PROJECTS

Game Retailer Website

Spring 2015

Class project at Mansfield University

After being taught the basics of HTML, the class was asked to create a five page website that included a menu so that each page could be linked to each other. We were also requested to model the website after one of our favorite websites. I modeled my website after a video game retailer, where my menu buttons took you to different video game consoles to show what games were available for that console.
